

Uniting Alive: Hobart 2020 March 2010 Update

Workshops for con- gregations, faith communities and leaders

Two workshops will be on offer in Hobart over the next couple of months aimed at supporting congregations as they consider responding to How then shall we live?.

The first, supported by the National Church Life Survey will help congregations and congregational leaders interpret the results of the Local Church Life Survey, conducted during September 2009.

- Date TBA
- Venue & Details TBA

The second is entitled Imagine: Nurturing a missional imagination in a church world and will assist congregations and leadership teams respond to the Report by exploring ways to live missionally in a constantly changing world. Resourced by Queensland Mission Consultant Duncan Macleod, this is one workshop not to miss.

- Saturday May 15th
- 10am-3.30pm
- Venue & Details TBA

How then shall we live?

After 9 months of work, the report of the Uniting Alive: Hobart 2020 task group has been released. The report, entitled How then shall we live? offers a vision alternative for the future of the Uniting Church in the greater Hobart region.

How then shall we live? describes a church that is far more concerned with participating in the mission of God, with serving in the wider community, and with being a people of God than with its own survival. The Uniting Church of greater Hobart will dream imaginatively, risk freely and resource courageously as it follows the way of Jesus. The Report offers an invitation to the congregations, faith communities and agencies of the Uniting Church in greater Hobart to enter into collaborative missional partnerships as together we live out the gospel in this city.

The vision for the Uniting Church in greater Hobart in 2020:

We believe our future will be characterized by:

- faithfulness to the way of Jesus
- commitment to justice and service
- collaboration and cooperation
- innovation and missional imagination

We must transform a pattern of inward-looking, struggling congregations into a vigorous presence which carries the Christian gospel into the life of the city.

Past traditions and heritage must be moulded into creative and relevant expressions of the gospel, rather than becoming barriers to change.

We will become a network of congregations, faith communities, fresh expressions of church and agencies giving voice and life to the gospel of Jesus Christ through this region.
